

Platt Adams, world famous athlete, who is to coach the Italian team for next year's Olympic games. Adams, who has won thirty-eight championship track events in the past few years and who was a member of our Olympic teams at London in 1908 and at Stockholm in 1912, sails for Italy this month.

Mabel J. Gray, attractive young Nevada business woman and probably the only woman president of a mining company. Attired in man's garb, she is shown prospecting on one of the six claims of her company.

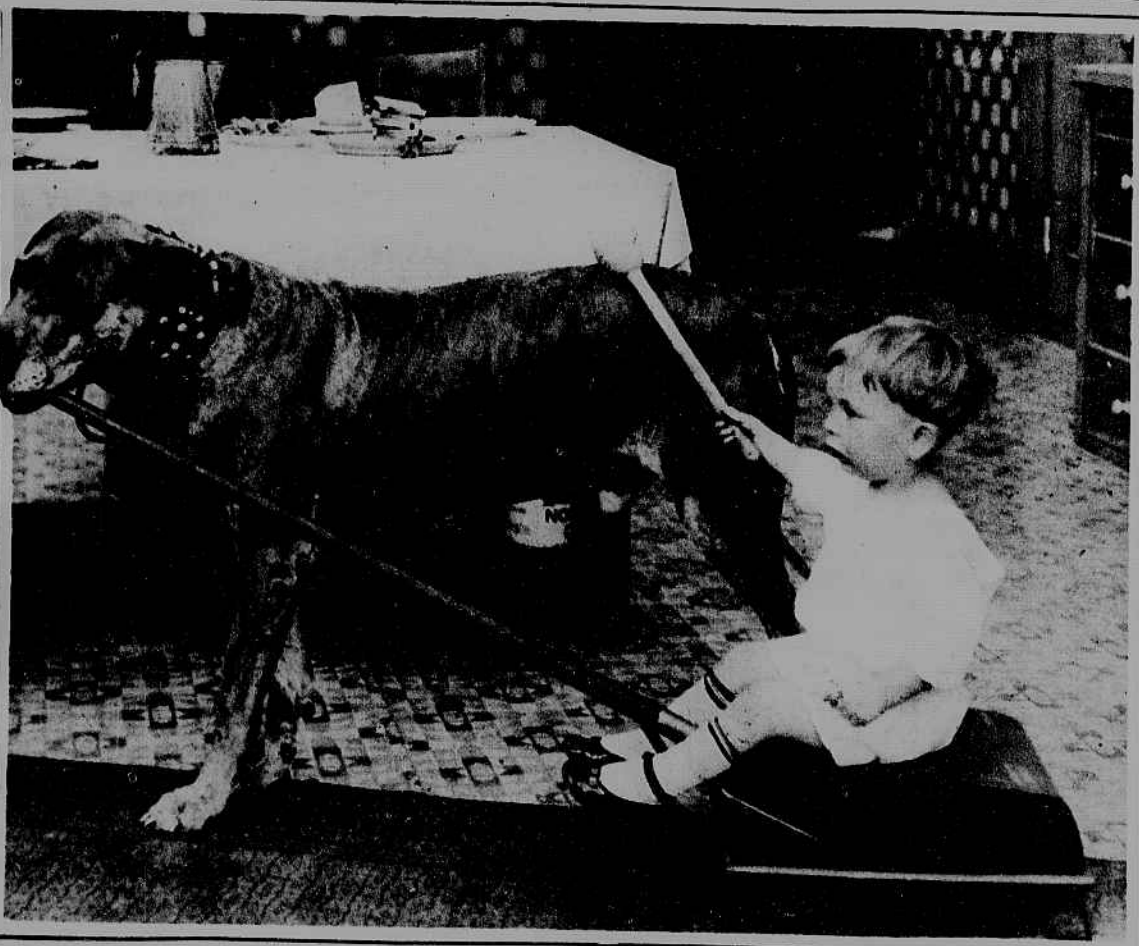

Several hundred modern young crusaders—Philadelphia school children—form a living tuberculosis double cross, the insignia of the world-wide campaign to fight the white plague. The benefits of fresh air, sanitary living, wholesome food and plenty of sleep is the message they preach.

Here's Frankie Lee at the wheel of his runaway motorboat, one of the thrilling stunts this clever youngster of the films goes through with in Pauline Frederick's picture, "Bonds of Love." Read about him in The Children's Tribune.

Right—Meet little Rosemary Carr, leading lady in the Paramount-Briggs movie comedies, photographed between scenes over at the Briggs Studios in Hudson, N. J. Read what she had to say to a reporter in to-day's Children's Tribune.

Teddy, the Great Dane whose antics you enjoy watching in those Paramount-Mack Sennett comedies at the movies. Polly Parrott interviewed Teddy the other day for readers of The Children's Tribune—and he had some interesting things to tell about himself. Turn to the pages of The Children's Tribune now and read what he had to say.
